Dear Sir:-

We are attorneys for an estate. In examining the effects of decedent we found a collection of old coins and we should be pleased to be referred to any publication which will enable us to put a valuation on the coins.

Thanking you in advance for any suggestions you may make, we are

Very truly yours,

Dear Sirs:-

Your letter of February 20th was duly received. As regards a publication that would enable you to put a valuation on a collection of old coins, there are various catalogues issued by coin dealers, which give prices for coins of different kinds, but for anything of a general collection it would not be an easy matter to value them with any one book. There is a book issued by C. H. Shinkle, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, which gives the auction records for most of the United States coins. This is published at one dollar, and can be obtained from Mr. Shinkle. The J. W. Scott Company, 30 John Street, New York, have, I believe, issued quite an extensive catalogue. Whether it would be of any use or not, I do not know. I think the best way to get a collection appraised would be to get some expert to appraise it. If you want to do this you might communicate with Mr. A. R. Frey, P. O. Box 1875, New York. Mr. Frey is not an auction dealer, but he occasionally does work of this kind. I also enclose a list of the principal coin dealers, which might possibly be of some use.

Very truly yours,

Director.
